A Legacy of Innovation and Experimentation

Born in Barcelona in 1913, Antonio Bonet arrived in Buenos Aires in 1938, bringing with him a fresh perspective that would revolutionize the architectural scene. Inspired by the principles of modernism, Bonet embraced innovation and experimentation, creating designs that were both functional and aesthetically striking.

The Lateral Exchanges: A Radical Concept

One of Bonet's most notable contributions to architecture was his concept of "lateral exchanges." This radical idea involved creating buildings that connected horizontally with adjacent structures, forming interconnected complexes that fostered community and urban vitality. Bonet believed that buildings should not be isolated entities but rather part of a larger urban fabric that seamlessly integrated with the surrounding environment.
