CAMERA LENS CHOICE (CONT)

18mm lens for WIDE SHOTS

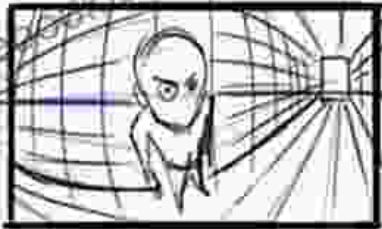

WIDE ANGLE LENSES are anything under 20mm. I wouldn't suggest going much further past a 14mm or a 12mm. The crazy effects of wide angle lenses tend to get exponentially worse with each millimeter decreased.

In my experience wide angle lenses work great on WIDE ESTABLISHING SHOTS. They allow you to squeeze a lot of terrain into the frame, and the subtle "bending" of space looks kinda cool.

18mm lens for CONFINED SPACES

Another great use for wide-angle lenses is in CONFINED SPACES. It is sometimes difficult or impossible to get a camera into a tiny closet or cockpit - but wide angle lenses allow us to get this kind of shot.

FORCED DEPTH - objects appear further than they really are

Don't OVERUSE Wide-angle shots. They tend to "bend" the vanishing points, giving that weird "FISH EYE LENS" look to everything. This can be great for certain desired effects - usually in dream sequences, cases of extreme paranoia, or when the character is under the influence of drugs or other stimulants.

Wide angle lenses are usually inappropriate for close up shots - UNLESS of course you are going for a weird paranoid or dream sequence feel.
