What is Go?

Go, also known as Weiqi in China and Baduk in Korea, is a two-player abstract strategy board game that originated in ancient China. The game is played on a 19x19 grid, using black and white stones. The objective of Go is to capture more territory than your opponent by surrounding empty spaces with your stones.

Why Play Go?

Go is not just a game; it's a journey of strategic thinking, patience, and self-discovery. Playing Go offers numerous benefits, including:

- Enhanced Cognitive Function: Go requires intense concentration and strategic thinking, which can improve memory, problem-solving skills, and overall brain function.

- Increased Patience and Focus: The slow-paced nature of Go teaches patience and the ability to remain focused for extended periods.
- Improved Self-Awareness: Go forces you to evaluate your own mistakes and learn from them, fostering self-awareness and personal growth.
- Cultural Enrichment: Go has a rich history and cultural significance, connecting you to ancient traditions and Eastern philosophy.
