What is a Tragus Piercing?

A tragus piercing is a piercing through the small, fleshy bump of cartilage that protrudes from the front of the ear. It's located just below the helix piercing and is often paired with other ear piercings, such as the conch piercing or the daith piercing.

Tragus Piercing Pain Level

The pain level of a tragus piercing can vary depending on your individual pain tolerance. However, most people report that it's a moderately painful piercing. The piercing itself usually takes only a few seconds, but the pain may linger for a few days or even weeks after.

Tragus Piercing Healing Time

Tragus piercings typically take 4 to 8 weeks to heal. During this time, it's important to keep the piercing clean and free of infection. You should also avoid sleeping on the pierced ear and avoid touching or playing with the jewelry.

Tragus Piercing Aftercare Instructions

To care for your tragus piercing, follow these aftercare instructions:

- Clean the piercing twice a day with a saline solution.
- Avoid sleeping on the pierced ear.
- Avoid touching or playing with the jewelry.
- See your piercer for regular checkups.

Tragus Piercing Jewelry

Tragus piercings can be adorned with a variety of jewelry, including studs, hoops, and barbells. The type of jewelry you choose will depend on your personal style and preference.

Here are some of the most popular types of tragus piercing jewelry:

- Studs: Studs are the most common type of tragus piercing jewelry. They're small and simple, and they can be made from a variety of materials, such as gold, silver, and titanium.
- Hoops: Hoops are another popular choice for tragus piercings. They're available in a variety of sizes and styles, and they can be made from a variety of materials, such as gold, silver, and titanium.

- Barbells: Barbells are a good choice for tragus piercings if you want something a little more substantial. They're available in a variety of lengths and gauges, and they can be made from a variety of materials, such as gold, silver, and titanium.

Tragus Piercings and Risks

As with any piercing, there are some risks associated with tragus piercings. These risks include:

- Infection
- Bleeding
- Swelling
- Pain
- Allergic reaction to the jewelry

It's important to weigh the risks and benefits of getting a tragus piercing before you decide to go ahead with it. If you're concerned about any of the risks, talk to your piercer before you get the piercing.

Tragus piercings are a stylish and versatile piercing that can be worn by people of all ages. However, it's important to understand the risks and aftercare instructions before you get a tragus piercing. If you're thinking about getting a tragus piercing, be sure to talk to your piercer to get all the information you need.
